The 3 Strike Rule is to be initiated anytime a service provider is unable to move forward with the incident or request without receiving a response from the user.

1. Try telephoning the requester seeking the information needed to continue processing their request. If there is no answer or the contact telephone number is unknown, then send an email message from within Remedy. Record your action within the Remedy ticket Work Info Summary / Notes field(s) if needed. Note: sending an email message will automatically place an entry within the Remedy ticket Work Info field.
2. After approximately seven (7) days of not receiving a response from the requester, try telephoning the requester again or send email from within Remedy seeking the additional information. Record your action within the Remedy ticket Work Info Summary / Notes field(s) if needed.
3. After approximately fourteen (14) days has passed having not heard from the requester, send an email message from within Remedy to the requester seeking the additional information.
4. After approximately twenty-one (21) days from the date and time of when the initial Remedy ticket was created, having not received a response from the requester, send a final email message from within Remedy to the requester seeking the additional information. You may also try calling.

Final email verbiage:

“Dear Sir or Ma’am,

Regretfully the Fermilab Service Desk has been unable to contact you by telephone and by email seeking additional information needed to move forward with your request. Unfortunately, we are left with no other choice than to mark your request “Resolved”.

If you would still like assistance, please reply back and we’ll re-open your request as long as we receive your response within 2 weeks time of when the Remedy ticket was marked resolved. Otherwise, a new request will have to be submitted. We look forward to the opportunity to assist you.”
