

Things to know about the new CD web site:

* Book marks: The new site has a completely new organizational structure than the old site. This made it unfeasible for us to provide redirects to all the old site's links. This means that most of your bookmarks will NOT work. We apologize for this in advance. We hope the new site's organizational structure makes sense and as such finding information will be intuitive. But if its not, please tell us (helpdesk@fnal.gov) and/or use the site map (on the home page quick links) or the search to find what you are looking for.

- Content sections: As a short tutorial the 4 content sections are:
 - About: Information important to non-Fermi employees and users
 - Metrics
 - Division scientist list
 - Outreach Activities
 - Mou's
 - Services: This section tells you
 - how to get help
 - how to get started as a computing user at Fermi
 - what services we provide and links to information in using those services
 - Science & Computing: This section talks about the Computing support we provide for the science of the Laboratory. In it you'll find links to:
 - Acclerator Projects
 - DAQ and Controls
 - Experiment Support
 - Physics Tools
 - Scientific Facilities
 - Internal: This section has information that used to be located on cdinternal.fnal.gov. Note that the cdinternal web server has been renamed to avoid confusion with this new section. You would navigate to this area for things like:
 - Leave usage
 - Effort reporting
 - division calendars and phone numbers
 - Budget and Finance
 - ES&H
 - Travel information

Note that there is also a quick links section on each page on the left side. We have tried to include the universally important links here.

- cdinternal.fnal.gov is out of production: As stated in the item above. cdinternal.fnal.gov has been renamed and all the content in it that was linked to on the old site has been migrated to the new site. If you find something from cdinternal.fnal.gov is missing, please let us know.
- Finding things:
 - As stated above we have provided a google search tool. For a while after the we go production the search tool will still find things that used to be on the old computing site since they are in its index.
 - There is also a site map link available in the quicklinks section of the home page. This gets updated automatically whenever pages are moved around or new pages added.
- Site Navigation and Conventions:
 - Clicking on the Title bar (Fermilab Computing Division) will get you back to the Home page

- Link to Fermilab at Work is at the bottom of every page in the gray border
 - Link to the main Fermilab web site is obtained from the Fermilab in the lower right corner of every page
 - News Boxes are some what tied to each of the content sections with a main on on the home page. CDweb updates the boxes on the home page and the main section pages. If you want an item posted please send to cdweb@fnal.gov. Note that we also post information we get from the powerdown email list, netdown email list and meetings on the CD calendar to the news areas automatically.
 - The light blue left menu is propagated based on the content section it is in. In other words this menu will look different if you are in the Internal section than it does if you are in the Services section.
- cdincludes: The cdincludes templates have changed. If you have copied the old cdincludes to your external server you will need to update the files as there are links in the header that will now not work (like the link to cdinternal). The new include files will be put in a zip file and be made accessible to CD staff. We have given the files the same names as the files in the old includes so you will just need to copy this over to your server includes area and unzip. If you know you need the new includes, please email cdweb@fnal.gov and we will make sure you get information on the location of the file.